

Displaced Homemakers Program At OCC

Women who have lost their primary source of financial support due to death, separation, divorce, or disability or military deployment of a spouse can find assistance through the Displaced Homemakers Program of Ocean County, located on Ocean County College's main campus on College Drive in Toms River.

Displaced homemakers are women of various ages, ethnicities, and socio-economic backgrounds who are affected by a shortfall in fiscal stability and need to obtain or upgrade their skills for transition into the paid labor market.

In 1979, the New Jersey Displaced Homemakers Act was signed into law by then-governor Brendan Byrne. The measure mandated that action be taken to address the problem of displaced homemakers, many of whom are emotionally or vocationally unprepared to enter the job market, require additional training or education, are working but underemployed, or are unaware of community resources.

Ocean County College is pleased to offer the Displaced Homemakers Program, which provides services to individuals looking to become economically self-sufficient. Through support, counseling, and training, the Displaced Homemakers Center at OCC can assist a woman in reaching her full potential.

Services include academic advising, employment and life counseling, training opportunities, career planning, connection to social and community organizations, assistance with the job search, health and wellness programs, and self-esteem and confidence building.

All of the services available at OCC's Displaced Homemakers Center are intended to enhance employability and earnings, and to impact positively on the quality of life for the displaced homemaker and her entire family.

Center coordinators draw on a wide range of contacts within the area to help individuals find the assistance, skills, and confidence they need.

The Displaced Homemakers

Program at OCC is funded through a grant from the New Jersey Department of Community Affairs' Division on Women.
